And this is what disturbs me: the fact that people today, despite living with more safety and wealth and access to information than anyone in human history, feel as though the world is going crazy and something drastic must be changed. But really it's not just them. It's us. We are going crazy. Each one of us, individually, capsized in the flood of negativity, we are ready to burn down the very structures on which the most successful civilizations in human history have been built.

To me that country map was just a curiosity mostly. It also does not pay for Etsy to show your shop or any others in countries with low buying power. It is doubtful Etsy would spend the time and energy involved to make this sort of move. There are high powered shops that were Etsy stars that suddenly fell down the rabbit hole.

Seems kind of underwhelming they'd use that symbol over and over again just to symbolize the tree they were born at. It almost seems like they're trying to deliver a message with this formation. It also reminds me of the Army of the Dead marching through the wall in the formation of the Stark House Sigil .

Is it Just Me or is Everything Shit is an encyclopedia of whinging on the worst pieces of modern culture: it's excesses, it's celebrities, government, politicians, food and so forth. As it is a critique of British (for the most part) pop culture as it was in 2005 the biting humor by 2010 has lost a few teeth.
