Leading with a limp will definitely cost you something. (7) 6. A good leader will, in time, disappoint everyone. Leadership requires a willingness to not be liked, in fact, a willingness to be hated. (14) 7. Doubt is the context for surrender. And flight is the path for obedience. When we're reluctant to lead, doubting

Reflection on Leading with a Limp - MSD

While many leadership books today focus on knowing your strengths and leveraging your power, Allender in Leading with a Limp argues that the best leaders live paradoxical lives, where they lead with power because of their weakness, find success through acknowledging their failures and lose their life, so that they might save it. OVERVIEW
