An interesting compilation of articles written by women over the last 100 years. Like any compilation, some were mediocre but some were really brilliant. Susan Sontag's article on torture and photography stood out in my mind as a particularly insightful look at our society and the images we now collect and share.

Journalistas: 100 Years of the Best Writing and Reporting by Woman Journalists-- the very title conjures a dirty, pony-tailed lady in combat pants with a pen behind her ear and a notebook in her hand. Though I adore the cover's white-bloused, cigarette-smoking blonde with the typewriter, too.

Animation: 100 Years of the Most Populous Countries "I think ageing demographics is a bigger issue in China than people think. And the problems it creates should be become evident as early as 2016." - Stan Druckenmiller, a 2013 quote. Over the last year, we've been very skeptical of the near-term potential for robust global economic growth.

Innovation that Changed the World. One hundred years ago today, Henry Ford and his team at Highland Park assembly plant launched the world's greatest contribution to manufacturing - the first moving assembly line. It simplified assembly of the Ford Model T's 3,000 parts by breaking it into 84 distinct steps performed by groups of workers as a rope pulled the vehicle chassis down the line.
