Have you ever wondered if your cat loves you? Cats express love for their owners in a number of ways. While some of these may be a bit obvious, other tokens of their affection have some hidden meaning behind them and you may have overlooked them not even realizing. Here's a list of 9 signs your cat actually loves you:

9 Signs Your Cat Actually Loves You - iHeartCats.com

My cat does a lot of these things head butting me, meowing while staring at me, follows me, shows his belly, blinking slowly, kneeding, and hurries to me when I call for him with my usual kissing noise which is always followed by affection.

3. Love bites. If your cat is a chronic nibbler, then chances are they've got a thing for you. It's pretty easy to tell the difference between a love bite and a regular cat bite: One hurts, and the other tickles! Nibbling isn't a common sign of love, but when a cat employs it, they're trying to say "you're awesome." 4. Tail twitching

If I am on the sidewalk and the neighbor cat sees me, I kneel down and call to it and it always comes over and plays. ... which is how it almost got killed one time the dogs don't love the cat ...

Sorry, science says cats simply can't love you the way ...

Bunting is when your cat rubs their cheeks on you or an object, head-butts you with their forehead, or rubs their head on you. It's a way for your cat to leave his scent on you, marking their territory. Cats do this when they love something or someone. They may practice bunting on other pets or their favorite humans.
