I have read the majority of the Tony Hillerman Navajo Mysteries (Joe Leaphorn/Jim Chee). I really enjoy reading about the 4 corners area and learning more about the Navajos, their history, and their culture. Listening Woman is a very compelling read. Many Hillerman fans think that it is one of his best novels in an 18 book series. I liked it, too.

The Blessing Way, which is pages 1-172 of 499 of this omnibus of the first three Joe Leaphorn & Jim Chee mysteries set on the Navajo Reservation, was the 30th book I read this year. First published in 1970, it doesn't feature Chee but Leaphorn's friend Bergen McKee in a mystery involving at least three gruesome murders.

The Joe Leaphorn Mysteries (Navajo Mysteries, #1-3)

The blind shaman called Listening Woman speaks of witches and restless spirits, of supernatural evil unleashed. But Lieutenant Joe Leaphorn of the Navajo Tribal Police is sure the monster who savagely slaughtered an old man and a teenage girl was human.

Listening Woman (1990) About book: Had it not been for some unfortunate connotations that I had with Hillerman (he was the author of choice for a particularly Wicked Stepmother), I would have most likely read his whole oeuvre by now. When he died earlier this year, I decided to make like a good Southwesterner and rectify this omission in my reading list.

"Listening Woman" is typical Tony Hillerman: a thrilling adventure in Navajo country, told from a Navajo's point of view and written by one who knows the lingo. The book begins with the totally impossible and progresses to a satisfying grand finale that couldn't be topped by a hot celebration on the 4th of July!

I found "Listening Woman" to be a fairly representative sample of Hillerman's work. The first chapters provided us not only with the beginnings of the story itself but also with an introduction to Navajo customs and beliefs as well as the poverty and ill health in which they still live.
