Laddie: A True Blue Story by Gene Stratton-Porter is a lot like my mystery favorite The Mystery of Hunting's End. No, it's not a crime novel. But I have loved this book for a very long time for a lot of reasons. Like Hunting's End, it came in a box of books from my Grandma. It's a first edition--but it's a well-loved, well-used first edition.

Laddie: A True Blue Story by Gene Stratton Porter is one of the sweetest, funniest stories of family life my family has ever read. We read it once when my children were young, but the youngest didn't remember it, so I read it again with 5 teens, a tween, and a first-grader. We all loved it more the second time around-including my four teen boys.

Laddie is considered the most autobiographical of Gene Stratton-Porter's novels, though she is certainly reflected as the "Bird Woman" in Freckles and A Girl of the Limberlost. She was the youngest of twelve children, just like Little Sister, who here narrates her own story and that of her family, especially her older brother Laddie.
